HONGKONG, JULY 7th, 1896.

WHENEVER a book is published in parts the later volumes can with difficulty obtain an unbiased opinion; the impression produced by the earlier numbers being the subsequent judgment. It was, therefore, a vast mistake of the Revision Committee not to withhold the publication of their labours on the New Testament till the complete Bible was ready. The New Testament is better known and dearer to the general public, whose votes will decide the success of the revision both of Old and New Testament. Four years ago the revised New Testament obtained a warm reception that could scarcely be called a welcome; the highest praise that seemed truthfully applicable to it was that it was a step in the right direction. Literary men complained of the violence done to the fine Elizabethan English, as if the authors of the Bible were Englishmen contemporary with Shakespeare; theological men of all schools deplored the loss of text or renderings which supported their respective tenets; while men of advanced views, encouraged by some concessions, cried still with the daughters of the house of Jacob, "Give, give." In short, a vast amount of labour had been expended and no one was satisfied, not even the Revisioners themselves, one or two of whom publicly admitted their dissatisfaction.

There can be little doubt that, deservedly or not, a similar verdict will be awarded to the Revised Version of the Old Testament just published. There is, however, here less room for complaining in some respects, as the older translation has been more strictly adhered to. Nearly all the important alterations have to be sought in the margin, but this very point will be a matter of offence to at least one class of readers, who will agree with the American Committee that very frequently text and marginal readings should be interchanged. In starting contrast with this general tone of caution is the frank admission in the margin of Isaiah xiv. 6. Zacheriah xiv. 18.—"The text is probably corrupt." Here is a text which the Revisioners with some cautious authority in that style which shields the pastures green of orthodoxy from the flood of so-called infidelity. If the text is admitted corrupt here, does it follow that, because no such note is found in the margins of Job, Psalms, Ezekiel, and Daniel, the text of these books is officially declared by the Revisioners free from the officious tampering, and free from the careless blunders of the ancient scribes. If the text is corrupt probably here, where a trifling obscurity occurs, why may it not be corrupt elsewhere, when it fails to convey a logical thought or one at variance with its context? Again, if the text is corrupt it surely must be corrected from the variations or by conjecture, both of which courses, especially the latter, have been closed by resolutions in Convocation to the Revisioners. The serious question then arises: Was it worth fourteen years of devoted labour to publish a Revised Version which admits its own incompleteness, which is not authorized by the Sovereign or Parliament to be read in churches, which is destitute of the ecclesiastical imprimatur, "Cum privilegio," and which is only occasionally referred to from the pulpit, episcopalian or nonconformist, to throw a light on obscure passages which is already obtainable from any commentary? Would it not have been better to have left the Authorized Version untouched, at least for the present? The "Variorum" Bible, with marginal notes attached to the Authorized Text, leaves nothing to be desired. No advantage has been made on the Speaker's Commentary, where the notes embody all, and more than all, the changes here incorporated in the text with a facilities embellishments, of authority as issued by approval of Convocation.

Critical research of the Bible is hardly out of its infancy. Discoveries in Egyptian and Assyrian monuments are almost daily throwing light on vexed questions. Critical conjecture is annually providing fresh food for reflection. Till some conscientious opinion is arrived at, is the time ripe for an Authorized Revision? About a quarter of a century ago, the Essays and Reviews, the Works on the Pentateuch by Colenso, and Jewett's Translations of the chief Pauline epistles, were viewed as heterodox; few would now venture to stigmatize them as such, endorsed as they are by high Ecclesiastical functionaries in more modern theological works. Another quarter of a century will not only find the corrupt condition of the Hebrew text fully recognized, but the least fanciful emendations of Hitzig, Ewald, Meier, and Bickell sifted and selected to correct notoriously corrupt passages. It is hopeless to attempt a translation of the Old Testament on a committee formed of men partly of the new party of the old school. We have on very good authority (Dout. xx. 10) a warning not to plow with an ox and an ass together. Let us not oppose schools publish their works independently, not combine to edit a translation in which each party has had to act on the principle of give and take, and neither can by any possibility be satisfied with the result.

But leaving its future prospects as chimerical, let us return to the form in which the Revision appears. We were prepared by the New Testament edition to find the verses combined into paragraphs and the poetical passages arranged in parallels. But in the Old Testament something further has been attempted. Except for the numbers in the margin one might suppose each of the historical books to be a ponderous chapter just as the Gospels appear. If we turn to the Pentateuch, however, we find intervals marked in such a graphic way that it baffles ingenuity to discover on what principle they are marked. The first interval occurs at Genesis vi. 9, and suggests that the Hebrew divisions are about to be observed; but if this were so there should be no space after xi. 29 and xi. 9, while there should be one before chap. xviii. The idea that Ewald's arrangement after the phrase "These are the generations of" has been adopted seems plausible from vi. 9, x. 1, xi. 10, but there are no intervals at ii. 4, xi. 27, xiv. 12, xvi. 1, xvi. 12, xvi. 13, xvi. 14, xvi. 15, xvi. 16, xvi. 17, xvi. 18, xvi. 19, xvi. 20, xvi. 21, xvi. 22, xvi. 23, xvi. 24, xvi. 25, xvi. 26, xvi. 27, xvi. 28, xvi. 29, xvi. 30, xvi. 31, xvi. 32, xvi. 33, ON THE SEA.
Bright as the azure above,
Add blue the waters round;
All that the heart could love
Were here, but joy were wanting.
When these we lay we were
Then on the clouded height
A thousand visions haunting
Their darkness shadows faint.
Wild bird that flies so lightly,
Ah, whether dost thou roam?
Thou art a wanderer rightly,
Thou art not fit to fly home.
For thou art not at rest,
And so to me as well,
Where spirit and soul rest,
Impulse me on thy way.

THE SULTAN OF TURKEY AT THE YILDIZ KIOSK.

There are probably few more charming spots in the world than the one which the Sultan of Turkey has chosen for the site of his permanent residence. During the past two centuries his Majesty's predecessors were now and again accustomed to visit the unpresumptuous summer-house which formerly crowned the Hill of the Star between Pera and Therapia; but as soon as Abdul Hamid succeeded, his brother had determined to turn the hill into a palace, and on the melancholy magnificence of Dolma Bagiche, and build him a house after the old heart on the picturesque heights of Yildiz. From the upper windows, or, better still, from the terrace-roof of his dwelling, the Sultan can gaze at his pleasure on the snow-covered crest of Mount Olympus, the bright blue waters of the Bosphorus, the happy outline of Prinkipo and the islands on the coast of Asia, and on the domes and minarets of Stamboul, while through the rich foliage of his park he may catch occasional glimpses of the ever-bell Golden Horn, and the villas and streets of Pera. The palace itself, with its numerous out-buildings, its stables, and its military camp, covers the summit of the Yildiz Hill, and covers the grounds and gardens which surround it slope gently downwards almost to the sea-shore below. A lofty wall encloses both palace and park, and the peaceful glare of its whitewashed brick is already in many places agreeably relieved by the presence of a luxuriant growth of ivy and creepers, while the tops of distant hills and towering trees wave over it in the refreshing breeze. A narrow river, the cream-coloured fountains of the upper story of the palace itself, with its broad flat roof and brightly painted green perennials. After leaving the landing-place at the arsenal (Topkapu), you pass the deserted courts of Dolma Bagiche and the prison-palace of the Sultan Murad, and the towers abruptly up the face of the hill, the Sultan's palace rises first to the right and then to the left, till you arrive somewhat unexpectedly before the great gate of curiously wrought ironwork, through which you peep at a pleasant picture of marble fountains and bright flowers and foliage beyond. The adjoining garden-house is full of soldiers, officers, and men, and in brilliant uniforms are walking to and fro, a military band is playing a stirring Turkish air, and all seems neatness and animation. There is no sign of the additional decay of the Turkish Empire here. The artillery which is popularly supposed to protect the portals of Yildiz is waiting. It is, together with the bomb-proof carriage in which the Sultan is said to take his daily drive, the happy creation of some newspaper correspondent in search of the sensational. At the order of the courteous chamberlain who receives you, a wicket-gate opens, and you are led across the paved court of dazzling whiteness which faces the entrance of the palace. In all this you may meet some stately peacocks, or maybe a flock of pigeons, before you reach your destination. A great glass-door admits the visitor to the spacious hall, which is perhaps the most striking feature in the whole building. White marble pillars of exquisite workmanship support the gilded roof; lofty mirrors, in gilt frames and carved brackets inlaid with mother-of-pearl and other precious stones, sumptuous divans covered with the richest and gayest products of the looms of Brousse invite you to share the dolce far niente of Eastern luxury. Enjoying the steady coolness of this Imperial ante-chamber you will probably find Osman Pasha, the hero of Plevna, and now Marshal of the Palace, chatting amiably with his namesake Osman Bey, the first chamberlain, who has just passed ten thousand pounds in resting up a great printing-office in Stamboul, and is, therefore, naturally full of his plans and projects. In another group, Reouf Pasha and Nusrat Pasha may be seen discussing their cigarettes in friendly company with Dressed Pasha, the amiable Frenchman who has been attached to the Sultan's person ever since his father, Abdul Medjid, visited Paris one thirty years ago. They will presently be joined by the Sultan's own physician, Mureyev Pasha, who, like all doctors in the East, enjoys considerable influence, and is consequently the object of much propitiation. Dervish Pasha, mufti of the Empire, and the maker of jokes and teller of stories, which had much to do with his rise to power, are probably tided him over, the discomforts of his mission to Cairo, is at present entertaining with some amusing anecdote a knot of the young Turkish secretaries and interpreters, who have been educated in Europe and now play an important part in the diplomacy of Yildiz. Apart, sitting upright, and idly smoking one of the coons, with his legs crossed behind him, sits the greatest man of all—his Highness Behem Agia, Chief Eunuch to the Sultan. He is getting old now, and has probably forgotten the time when, as a mere boy, he had the good fortune to be kidnapped by some Osman Digna of those days, and sent from his obscure village in the Sudan to the golden and gilded city of Constantinople. At present he ranks with a Prime Minister and a Field-Marshal, is a knight of half a score Imperial, Royal, and Christian orders, disputes precedence with an ambassador, wears a diamond ring worth a king's ransom on his little finger, submits with piousness to the ceremonial of the bath, and is the confidant of the faithful, and wishes to spend his fortune in the erection of a princely mosque, in which he shall some day be buried in the odour of sanctity. He is popular, notwithstanding his greatness, for his nature is kindly, and he is ever ready to do a good turn for his friends.

to realise that you are actually in the presence of his Imperial Majesty the Sultan of all the Turks, the hereditary Caliph of the many millions of Moslems who people so important a part of three continents, and the possessor of titles which it seems something akin to profanity to pronounce. The red Turkish cap which he always wears, his pale and expressive face, his dark but somewhat unbecoming eyes, and his carefully clipped beard and moustache, will alone remind you of the East; for his well-chosen clothes and elegant pointed leather boots come from the workshop of some well-known Parisian artist, who takes care that his Imperial customer keeps pace with every change in the fashions of the day. After a minute's conversation his Majesty generally manages to put his visitors at their ease, and you are in all probability already convinced that you are talking to a man of great intelligence, of no common originality of thought, and perfectly conversant with the facts of European history and the various phases of modern civilization. It is not likely that you will be likely to forget the attention of that monarque qu'on aime, and any more than the good people of Pera will ever cease to feel amusement in the spectacle of the capricious plumpness of Printing House Square, in a Tyrolean hat, a brand-new Turkish decoration, and his legs thrust out of a first-floor window, viewing the progress of the Sultan to the Yildiz Kiosk. The Sultan, as a rule, only talks politics to Ambassadors and Ministers, and keeps his other guests pretty strictly to the weather, the sights of Constantinople, and a sprinkling of botany, natural history, and sport. It is an open secret that he has proved himself a match for more than one astute diplomatist, and even those who have not been questioned the purity of his patriotism or the rare ability with which he constantly endeavours to protect the best interests of his country.

His Majesty is accustomed to rise at an early hour, and after he leaves his seraglio, and has eaten a slight breakfast—at times he only drinks a cup of black coffee—he is likely to forget the attention of that monarque qu'on aime, and any more than the good people of Pera will ever cease to feel amusement in the spectacle of the capricious plumpness of Printing House Square, in a Tyrolean hat, a brand-new Turkish decoration, and his legs thrust out of a first-floor window, viewing the progress of the Sultan to the Yildiz Kiosk.
